Thés de la Pagode use imperial or fine picking methods: the young shoots or "pekoe" are picked in springtime, from small gardens high in the mountains. They are then prepared and preserved using ancient Chinese methods.

Legend states that millions of years ago, dragon fruit came to be from the last breath of a dragon, presented to the Emperor of China as proof of the monster's defeat. The legend adds that it was the search for this fruit, defended tooth and nail by the dragons, which led to the species' demise.
