Mafia Export Francesco Forgione

Day after day, more short news reports reveal anti mafia operations, but they have no impact on a public that is so accustomed to the mafia it is practically indifferent. Traffickers from the Ndrangheta transport tonnes of cocaine from South America, the Camorra have created a multinational company of counterfeit products and in Spain Italian bosses fill coastlines with cement and use them as ports for their drug deliveries. Fransisco Forgione explains the main facets of the mafias economic colonization, providing a clearer image of the current state of this hidden globalisation.
